Hollywood EAST

It's not just Anna Kendrick—all sorts of Mainerers are going ga-ga in La-La land.

BY ZEE KRSTIC

What must it be like to be Anna Kendrick right now, with pals like George Clooney and Jason Schwartzman and the world at your door? I mean, you're on the cover of Glamour, right?

Fresh from reprising her role as spunky Beca in smash-hit Pitch Perfect 2, Kendrick stars in the upcoming comedy Get a Job with Bryan Cranston (Breaking Bad) and Miles Teller (Whiplash, the Divergent series) to be released later this year. The Portland native, who previously broke the box office with 2014's Into the Woods, now plays Jillian Stewart, a college graduate struggling to hold down a job. Kendrick has also finished filming the drama The Hollars with John Krasinski (The Office) and The Accountant alongside Ben Affleck, both to be released later this year.

In her Washington Post article "Amy Schumer and the Rise of the Woman Crush" Lavanya Ramanathan defines the "woman crush" as follows:

"To crush is to want to borrow Mindy Kaling's pencil skirts and tell off street harassers with The Daily Show's Jessica Williams. And yes, that is us all over the Internet posing like actress Anna Kendrick on the Pitch Perfect 2 poster."

"They're just like us! we women whisper to each other. Which is to say that they're brilliant."

And listen to Marie Claire's Claire: "With her arms crossed and a 'mess with me and die' face, Kendrick started an Instagram revolution after seeing photos of girls mimicking the pose. The actress put together two, posted it to Instagram, and the results speak for themselves.

"But that's not the most amazing thing about this story. Apparently, the studio wasn't quite on board with the stance. As Kendrick pointed out in her second posting: "They were sweating because I wouldn't strike a sexy pose. Love that you guys embrace Beca the badass!"

TIMOTHY SIMONS

Born in Readfield, Timothy Simons has quickly garnered the attention of the film industry with his role in The Interview and as Jonah Ryan in HBO's Veep. Simons is set to break into fame this October when he appears in the modern revamp of R.L. Stine's Goosebumps, featuring Jack Black as the celebrated author himself.

 I don't think having an Ambien addiction would be all that bad. But that might just be the Ambien talking.

According to fracturedatlas.com Caitlin Fitzgerald's next project is a film by Sophia Takal. Always Shine "follows two best friends, Anna and Beth, who take a weekend trip to Big Sur to reestablish a bond that has been broken by years of competition and jealousy. Tensions mount, however, leading to an utterly unexpected yet inevitable confrontation that will change both of their lives forever."

DAVID E. KELLY

After a bidding war with Netflix, HBO has purchased David E. Kelly's Big Little Lies, a mini-series adaptation of the #1 New York Times best-seller by Liane Moriarty. According to time.com, the murder mystery about three young mothers who live seemingly idyllic lives is set to star Reese Witherspoon and Nicole Kidman. Waterville-born Kelley has written for and produced popular shows such as Boston Legal, The Practice, and Ally McBeal.

CAITLIN FITZGERALD

Always Shine, the newest film from Camden's own Caitlin Fitzgerald, is currently in post-production. According to screendaily.com, the psychological thriller portrays two actresses who embark on a road trip to repair their friendship. Meanwhile, Fitzgerald continues to star in Masters of Sex, an award-winning Showtime drama set in the 1950s about pioneering researchers of human sexuality. STEPHEN KING

A film adaptation of Cell, Stephen King's technophobic take on zombie apocalypse, is set to be released in 2015 from Genre Co., The Benaroya Pictures, and Cargo Entertainment, according to IMDb. The 2006 novel depicts an enemy who transforms cell phone users into vicious automatons through a global-network signal called "The Pulse." The novel's protagonist, Clay, is unaffected by the attack. In order to find his son, he treks from Boston to Maine with a small group of others who have retained their sanity, encountering possessed "phoners" and escalating cyber attacks along the way. King also wrote the script for the movie, but has revealed that the film's ending will differ from the novel's conclusion. Cell stars Samuel L. Jackson, John Cusack, and Isabelle Fuhrman and is directed by Tod Williams, director of the 2010 horror movie Paranormal Activity 2. Viewers may never touch their cell phones again. Cell's release date was not set at press time.

RACHEL NICHOLS

Capitalizing on her toughness from her roles in Alias, Criminal Minds, and GI Joe as well as her experiences in the far-out future with Star Trek

and Syfy's Continuum, Rachel Nichols is set to play a fearless doctor fighting a viral outbreak in the upcoming Pandemic, reports SciFiMovies.com. Far from her hometown of Augusta, Nichols leads a research team against the disease-ravaged city alongside Alfie Allen (Game of Thrones), Mehki Phifer (ER), and Missi Pyle (Gone Girl).

ANNA BELKNAP

Long after her days of busting bad guys and upholding the law in CSI: NY and Hawaii Five-0, Damariscotta native Anna Belknap makes her first film appearance in nearly a decade in No Way Jose (IMDb). She stars with Disney prodigy Emily Osment and Community's Gillian Jacobs in a coming-of-age comedy in which star Adam Goldberg (Saving Private Ryan) works hard to get the love of his life—for the second time.

MATTHEW DELAMATER

It wasn't long after Matthew Delamater moved to Portland and took a job in banking that he landed a recurring role in NBC's American Odyssey. Delamater also performed alongside Joe Manganiello, Dianna Agron and Jason Sudeikis in Tumbledown, which premiered at the 2015 Tribeca Film Festival. Written and directed by Portland duo Desi Van Til and Sean Mewshaw, Tumbledown follows Rebecca Hall (The Prestige) as an impossibly young widow who confronts the death of her husband with help from a brazen New Yorker, played by Sudeikis. Delamater is currently playing Laertes in the Portland Fenix Theater summer production of Hamlet in Deering Oaks Park, as well as producing new episodes for his microbrewery web series featuring local businesses such as the Allagash Brewing Co.

LINDA LAVIN

Portland native Linda Lavin has stepped back into film with The Intern, starring Robert De Niro as a 70-ish man who takes an internship at a fashion website headed by Anne Hathaway.

"I play a woman...who is attracted to him and his older friends in this wonderful script by Nancy Meyers," says Lavin. "I keep inviting [him] to dinner [but] he's more interested in a certain younger woman played by Rene Russo...It was just amazing to work with the generous, extraordinary DeNiro. This year I've also worked on an independent film with Adrien Brody [Manhattan Nocturne], a film noir. I've guest-starred on The Good Wife. My cabaret act occasionally happens in supper clubs and theaters. I call my show 'Starting Over,' since that's what I seem to be doing. After every 17 years, I seem to move locations in my life."

But she still finds time to visit Maine. "It's amazing how much Portland has changed since I grew up there!"
